Duty of Disclosure

Your duty of disclosure to the insurer

Before you enter into a life insurance contract, you have a duty to tell the insurer anything that you know, or could reasonably be expected to know, may affect its decision to insure you and on what terms.

You have this duty until the insurer agrees to insure you.

You have the same duty before you extend, vary or reinstate your insurance cover.

You do not need to tell the insurer anything that:

- reduces the risk it insures you for, or
- is common knowledge, or
- the insurer knows or should know as an insurer, or
- the insurer waives your duty to tell it about.

If you do not tell the insurer something

In exercising the following rights, the insurer may consider whether different types of cover can constitute separate contracts of life insurance. If they do, the insurer may apply the following rights separately to each type of cover.

If you do not tell the insurer anything you are required to, and the insurer would not have insured you if you had told the insurer, the insurer may avoid the contract to provide you with that insurance within three years of entering into it.

If the insurer chooses not to avoid the contract, the insurer may, at any time, reduce the amount you have been insured for. This would be worked out using a formula that takes into account the premium that would have been payable if you had told the insurer everything you should have. However, if the contract provides cover on death, the insurer may only exercise this right within three years of entering into the contract.

If the insurer chooses not to avoid the contract or reduce the amount you have been insured for, the insurer may, at any time vary the contract in a way that places the insurer in the same position it would have been in if you had told the insurer everything you should have. However, this right does not apply if the contract provides cover on death.

If your failure to tell the insurer is fraudulent, the insurer may have the right to refuse to pay a claim and treat the contract as if it never existed.

Our duty of disclosure

The Trustee has a similar duty to tell the insurer anything that it knows that may affect the insurer's decision to provide you with insurance, and if the Trustee fails to do so the consequences are comparable.

This means you are required to answer all of the questions in this form honestly and completely. If you are unsure about this requirement, call us on 1300 300 273.
