What will retirement look like?

You’ve spent your life building your savings, so you can enjoy life when you stop working.

Depending on when you stop working, you might be retired for 20 years or more. Have you given much thought to what your lifestyle will look like once you stop working? It’ll be different for everybody, but here are a few things to consider.

What will your expenses be?

› Housing: do you own or rent? Think about what this will cost in the future. Are there renovations or upkeep expenses you should factor in?

› Travel: whether it’s to visit family or see new sights, you might want to set aside a budget for regular getaways.

› Car: consider maintenance costs for your car. Will you need a new car in the next 10–20 years?

› Children and family: as your family grows up, do you plan to offer additional financial support?

› Health and wellbeing: you might need to set aside more money for medical expenses like preventative health checks.

› Hobbies: maintaining your hobbies or trying out new ones could start to add up.

› Other expenses: will you have money set aside to cover unforeseen expenses and emergencies?
What won’t you need anymore?

› A large house: you might consider downsizing if the family home is no longer suitable. You may be able to put some of the downsizing proceeds into your super – see page 17 for more details.

› Additional cars: is one car enough now that your lifestyle has changed?

› Daily travel expenses: if you’re not travelling to and from work every day, you might find you save on public transport and parking costs.

How will you spend your time?

› Hobbies: you may already have some, or you might use your spare time to learn something new. Hobbies are a great way to keep in touch with friends and meet new people.

› Travel: explore the world or your own backyard.

› Activities with family and friends: social outings are a big part of most people’s lives. You might find you’re busier than ever once you’ve got more downtime.

› Volunteer: many retirees find volunteer work a rewarding way to use their spare time.

› Exercise: keeping fit can help maintain both physical and mental health.

› Working part-time: you might prefer to keep working, or start a new or different job once you’ve retired.
Many people retire earlier than they planned to

- 10% Later than planned
- 40% At the age expected
- 50% Earlier than planned

Only 10% of Australians feel very well prepared for retirement.

Most of the time it’s for health reasons

- 37% Health issues
- 11% Accident or disability
- 21% I became unemployed
- 14% To take care of family/friends
- 13% No longer want to keep working (full-time)
- 6% Saved enough for a comfortable retirement/financial adviser said I could
- 5% Wanted more time for myself
- 4% Became eligible to receive the Government Age Pension
- 3% Wanted to spend more time with friends and family

Work out what you’ll need

To set your financial goals, you’ll need to consider a few things.

What money will you live on in retirement?

Most retirees receive income from at least a couple of sources. These may include the money in your super account and investments outside super. The money you live on in retirement may also include some kind of pension payment or allowance from the Government. See page 31 to learn more about the Government Age Pension.

Components of retirement income

- Government Age Pension
- Super
- Savings
- Investments

Where will it come from?

For most of us, income in retirement will be a combination of superannuation and Government support like the Government Age Pension.

The challenge is, many people find that even if they’re eligible for the Government Age Pension, it may not be quite enough to live comfortably. One option is to use your super to top up any Age Pension payments you’re eligible for, giving you more income to cover everyday expenses like groceries and bills.
When to access super

In Australia, you may be able to access your super when you reach preservation age. This varies depending on when you were born.

Depending on your income and assets, you may also be eligible for the Government Age Pension when you reach qualifying age. This may be 65, 66 or 67 depending on your birthdate (see page 31).

How much money will you need?

Whatever your retirement plans, you’ll need money put away to meet your daily expenses, as well as any unexpected costs. It will also depend on any outstanding debts you might have. The table on the next page might give you an indication of how much you’ll need, but the exact amounts will depend on your lifestyle.

Are you on track?

Use our super projection calculator to work out how much money you could get in retirement, how long your super could last and how adding a few extra dollars to your super now, could make a big difference when it’s time to retire.

Keep your money working for you

You don’t have to withdraw your super to access it when you reach preservation age. There are other options to consider. It all depends where you’re at and what you want to achieve. Either way, keeping your money invested with AustralianSuper means more potential investment returns in the long run*.

Keep working with TTR Income

You can continue working as you transition to retirement with a TTR Income account. This way you could save more or work less in the lead up to your retirement.

Retire with Choice Income

Choice Income is an account based pension that gives you a regular income when you’re retired. You still have full control of your money and can make withdrawals at any time†.

We’ll look at TTR Income in more detail on pages 22–26.

We’ll look at Choice Income on pages 28–30.

* Investment returns aren’t guaranteed. Past performance isn’t a reliable indicator of future returns.
† Must meet conditions of release.
How to get ready

There are five steps you can take to get ready for retirement. By acting now we can work together to make the most of your super savings.

5 steps to get started:

1. Reduce debt
2. Combine your super
3. Add to your super
4. Check your insurance
5. Nominate beneficiaries

STEP 1

Reduce debt

While you’re still working, you might want to focus on paying off your debts. For a lot of people, it makes sense because you’ll pay less interest and you may not have to use all of your super to pay off debts, leaving you some super for your retirement.

Whatever your situation, a financial adviser can help you work out the best way forward. Find out about our advice options on page 38.
STEP 2

Combine your super

If you have more than one super account, you could be wasting money paying more than one set of fees. The more fees you pay, the less super for you.

AustralianSuper $50,000
$437

Average retail super fund $50,000
$829

Average super fund $50,000
$707

TOTAL $150,000

Annual fees $1,973

AustralianSuper $150,000

Annual fees $1,077

By combining all her super, Grace saves $896 a year

Source: SuperRatings Fundamentals December 2019. Comparisons are for admin and investment fees over a year for the AustralianSuper Balanced option, the average super fund and the average retail (Master Trust). The AustralianSuper example is based on the investment fee for the Balanced option for FY 2018/19 and the admin fee effective from 1 April 2020. Other fees and costs may apply. Fees differ for Choice Income (our account based pension). See australiansuper.com/fees for full details of all fees and costs.

Before combining your super, you should ask your super provider for information about any fees or charges that may apply, or any other information about the effect this transfer may have on your benefits, such as insurance cover.

Find out more at australiansuper.com/combine or through your online account at australiansuper.com/login
STEP 3
Add to your super
Small amounts can make a real difference to your final super balance. Adding a few extra dollars today means you’ll have more savings down the road*.

Making additional contributions to your super can also benefit you now, not just in the future, because making voluntary contributions could mean you pay less tax overall. And the earlier you add, the more it could become – because it has time to grow.

You can add to your super in different ways:
› salary sacrifice (before tax)
› Government co-contributions
› after-tax contributions
› spouse contributions
› downsizer contributions.

Salary sacrifice (before tax)
Adding to your super from your before-tax salary can be a great way to give your super savings a boost, while also reducing the amount of income tax you pay. When you salary sacrifice, your employer diverts some of your salary directly into your super instead of your takehome pay.

Salary sacrificing could help you save money by reducing your taxable income, and saving more on tax.

The money you salary sacrifice into your super is taxed at 15% (if your income is over $250,000 an additional 15% applies). Compare this to your usual tax rate which can be as high as 47%. This is why it usually benefits middle to high income earners – because the tax on super contributions is less than the tax paid on salary income.

Check with your employer
Some benefits that are based on your salary level, like compulsory employer super contributions, holiday loadings, shift allowances and overtime may be reduced if you decide to use salary sacrifice, so it’s a good idea to speak to your employer first.

How much you can salary sacrifice
You can add up to $25,000 (this limit includes your employer’s Superannuation Guarantee payments) from your before-tax income every year without incurring higher tax.

You can make personal contributions claimed as a tax deduction. Tax-deductible super contributions are treated as concessional contributions and are included in the same annual concessional contributions cap. You must lodge a notice of intention with us before you claim a tax deduction.

* You should consider your debt levels, contribution caps that may apply and tax issues before adding to your super.
Unused concessional carry forward rule
If you have a total superannuation balance of less than $500,000 on 30 June of the previous financial year, you may be entitled to contribute more than the general concessional contributions cap and make additional concessional contributions for any unused amounts from previous years.

The first year you will be entitled to access and carry forward unused amounts is the 2019–20 financial year. Unused amounts are available for a maximum of five years, and after this period will expire.

Add to your super after tax
After-tax contributions are an easy way to add to your super, by simply depositing your money into your super account after you’ve been paid. After-tax contributions are known as ‘non-concessional contributions’.

The good news is that any contributions you make from your after-tax income aren’t taxed when they go into your account or when you make a withdrawal because you’ve already paid tax on that money.

After-tax contributions can be beneficial for low to middle income earners and those who aren’t working. That’s because depending on your situation, making after-tax additions to your super could result in a co-contribution or tax offset from the Government. See next page for more information.

<tr>

<td>$100,000 per year‡</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* Additional super contributions are only available to individuals with a total super balance (on 30 June of the previous financial year) under the transfer balance cap – currently $1.6m.

† The three-year period is triggered when you first exceed the after-tax contribution cap for that financial year. Any amounts above this may be withdrawn along with associated earnings, which will be taxed at your marginal tax rate. Excess contributions left in your account will be taxed at 47% (includes 2% Medicare levy).

‡ You can only make personal after-tax super contributions if you meet the work test or qualify for the work test exemption.
Government co-contributions
If you earn less than $53,564 per year (before-tax), and make after-tax contributions, the Government will also contribute to your super*.

What is a co-contribution?
Depending on how much you earn, and if you make after-tax contributions to your super account, the Government also makes a contribution (called a co-contribution) up to a maximum amount of $500. The co-contribution is tax free and isn’t taxed when it’s deposited into, or withdrawn, from your super account.

The Government co-contribution amount depends on your income

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Your total annual income FY 19/20†</th>

<td>$1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Government contributes</td>
<td>$500</td>
<td>$0 to $500</td>
<td>$0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

How much you receive depends on your total income and how much money you add to your super from your after-tax pay. If you earn $38,564 or less, you could receive the full $500 bonus if you add $1,000 or more to your super from your take-home pay.

If you earn between $38,564 and $53,564, you’ll still get a Government co-contribution, but not the full amount.

* You must have a total super balance below the $1.6 million transfer balance cap, be under 71 years of age at the end of the tax year you made the eligible personal super contribution, and not exceed your non-concessional contributions cap for that financial year. Thresholds effective for financial year 2019/20. Other conditions apply.
† Assessable income, plus reportable employer super contributions, plus reportable fringe benefits for the 2019/20 financial year.

Learn how you can add to your super with Government co-contributions at australiansuper.com/forms
Spouse contributions*
Making payments into your spouse’s super is a great way to build your combined nest egg, while saving tax at the same time.

If your spouse’s assessable income is less than $37,000 a year, you may be able to claim 18% of every dollar you contribute into their super account and receive a tax offset – up to a maximum rebate of $540 a year†.

Downsizer contribution*
From 1 July 2018, the Australian Government introduced a ‘downsizing’ measure which applies to the sale of your home (your main residence), where the exchange of contracts for the sale occurs on or after 1 July 2018.

If you are 65 years old or over and meet the eligibility requirements, you may be able to make a downsizer contribution into your superannuation of up to $300,000 from the proceeds of selling your home.

Additional eligibility criteria may apply. For more details visit ato.gov.au
† The tax offset is available if the income is over $37,000, but the offset reduces to nil at $40,000. Other terms and conditions apply, for more details visit ato.gov.au

Find out more at australiansuper.com/spouse
Or for information about the downsizer contribution, head to the Australian Taxation Office website ato.gov.au
STEP 4
Check your insurance

Money when it matters
Most super funds offer automatic insurance to help you protect your future income and the future of the people who matter to you. But how do you know if the type and level of cover you have is right for you?

How much cover do you need?
As you get older, your insurance needs change, so you might find yourself with too much, too little or the wrong type of cover. Your cover might need to change if:

› you get married or divorced
› you add to your family (including stepchildren) or your adult children move out
› you start or end a de facto relationship
› you take out a mortgage to purchase or build your main home in Australia
› your spouse, de facto or other dependent dies.

Your cover choices
You can choose the types of cover you need:

› Death cover (also known as life insurance): Provides your beneficiaries with a lump sum payout if you pass away.

› Total & Permanent Disablement (TPD) cover: Can provide you with a lump sum payout to help out if you become totally and permanently disabled and can no longer work.

› Income Protection: Can provide you with access to a monthly income if you become ill or injured and are temporarily unable to work.

You can apply to increase, reduce or cancel your AustralianSuper cover any time to suit your needs. You’re not able to set up insurance cover on a Choice Income or TTR Income account, so if you want to keep your existing insurance cover it would need to remain on your super account.

To work out how much cover you need, visit australiansuper.com/InsuranceCalculator
Many people don’t realise that even if you have a valid Will and you specify where you want your assets to go, this may not apply to your super. That’s why it’s important to nominate a beneficiary, so we know who you’d like to receive your super in the event of your death.

There are a few ways you can do this:

Non-binding nominations
A non-binding nomination is not legally binding, but it means you let us know who you’d prefer to receive your super if you die. So although we’d take your wishes into account, in the end we’d have to decide who your account would be paid to according to your situation at the time and in accordance with the law.

Binding nominations
A binding nomination provides greater certainty over who receives your death benefit. If you make a binding nomination, we’ll pay your account to the person/s you’ve nominated – as long as your nomination is valid at the time of your death.

A binding nomination is valid if:

› it was made within three years of your death
› all the individuals nominated are alive at the time of your death (for example, if you nominated three beneficiaries and one was no longer alive at the time of your death, your nomination would be invalid)
› all the individuals nominated are eligible.
If you have a Choice Income or TTR Income account
You can make a non-binding or binding nomination, plus you have an additional option – to nominate a reversionary beneficiary. This means whoever you nominate can then choose to receive the balance of your account as an income in the event of your death. If so, they would receive regular payments from your account until the balance reaches $0.

Who you can nominate
Your beneficiaries can be:
› your spouse or partner
› your children*
› interdependants†
› other financial dependants‡
› your estate or legal personal representative§.

* Conditions apply for reversionary beneficiary nominations.
† Someone who lives with you and shares a close personal relationship where one or both of you provide financial and domestic support, and personal care of the other.
‡ Someone who relies on you financially.
§ A legal personal representative is someone who looks after your estate or will, and can’t be nominated for reversionary nominations.

Keep working

Make the most of your super as you transition to retirement.

What is transition to retirement (TTR)?

Transition to retirement (TTR) is a strategy recognised by the Government that allows you to access some of your super while you’re still working. You could use TTR in two ways:

Save more
› grow your super faster
› pay less tax

OR

Work less
› work fewer hours
› access your super* to top up your reduced take-home pay

while taking home a regular income

To open a TTR Income account, you must:

✓ have reached your preservation age (see page 9)
✓ move at least $25,000 to your new TTR Income account and leave a minimum balance of $6,000 in your super account if you would like to keep it open†

* Government prescribed minimums and maximums apply. For details view the TTR Income Product Disclosure Statement at australiansuper.com/TTRGuide
† To find out more about the minimum balance for your super account, visit australiansuper.com/AccessYourSuper

You can also visit our online learning module australiansuper.com/TTR
How TTR works

Once you reach your preservation age you can open a TTR Income account alongside your regular super account.

The two accounts work together and may reduce the overall tax you pay while helping boost your super savings. Since you’re still working, employer payments mean your super balance continues to grow. And at the same time, you receive payments, transferred directly to your bank account.

Initially, you’ll use money from your super account to open your TTR Income account. Once your TTR Income account is set up, your two accounts will work together and help you transition to retirement.

Employer payments

- Any positive investment returns
  - Super account
  - Fees and taxes
  - Any negative investment returns

- Income payments
- Fees and taxes
- Any negative investment returns

Salary sacrifice/after-tax payments

- TTR Income account
- Any positive investment returns
- Fees and taxes
- Any negative investment returns
Save more with TTR

In the years before you retire, you could save more super and pay less tax by adding to your super from your before-tax salary (using salary sacrifice).

You can then top up your pay packet with regular payments from your TTR Income account.

With TTR, you:

› could pay less tax if you’re aged 60 or older
› can speed up your rate of saving, and
› can access the rest of your money once you retire.

Example: Peter just turned 60 and is keen to add to his $175,000 super balance. He earns $60,000 a year, and is looking forward to retiring at 65. Through TTR, Peter found he could add $17,000 to his retirement savings over five years without reducing his take-home pay.
Work less with TTR

Working fewer hours as you get older can be a good way to ease into retirement, and could mean you’re able to stay in the workforce longer than you otherwise would.

With TTR, you can:

› take time to look after yourself or others, ease yourself into retirement, or extend your career by working less

› top up your pay packet with regular payments from your TTR Income account

› access the rest of your money once you retire.

Your super will also continue to grow as you keep working.

Example: Tina is 58, her take-home pay is $53,500 and she has $140,000 in super. If Tina decided to work one day less a week, her take-home pay would drop to $44,900. Tina can set up a TTR Income account to replace her reduced pay, so the money in her pocket stays the same.
When you turn 65, change jobs after 60 or retire

When you turn 65 your TTR Income account will change automatically to a Choice Income account. If you tell us when you change jobs after 60 or retire, we’ll also move your account to Choice Income. Investment earnings in Choice Income are tax free.

You can learn more about Choice Income at australiansuper.com/RetirementGuide
Ready to retire now

Now that you’re approaching the next chapter of your life, it’s a good idea to consider different income options for when you stop work. This will help you plan ahead so that you can live the retirement lifestyle you want.

While some of your retirement income may come from the Government Age Pension (if eligible), you can also turn your super into a regular income with an account based pension to top up any Age Pension you may receive. This way you can enjoy life after work while keeping the rest of your savings invested to last the distance.

Components of retirement income

Government Age Pension + Account based pension – Choice Income account = More money every fortnight

Seamless Transfer
Are you already with AustralianSuper and invested in Member Direct investment option? If so, you could use Seamless Transfer to open a Choice Income account without having to sell and re-purchase your holdings in Member Direct, preventing the trigger of capital gains and losses.

Conditions apply. You can learn more about Seamless Transfer at australiansuper.com/MemberDirect
Will you get the Government Age Pension?

The Government Age Pension is a regular fortnightly income, paid by the Government via Centrelink, designed to help eligible older Australians pay for basic living expenses. If you’re eligible, it can supplement payments from your super and provide an additional income once you’ve stopped working.

Around 70% of older Australians are eligible for either a part or full Government Age Pension. And the great news is, you don’t have to spend all of your super before you can access it.

Before you can receive your first payment, you’ll need to meet age and residential requirements set by the Government. If you meet these conditions, you’ll then need to pass the Assets test and the Income test. These are used to determine your eligibility and the Government Age Pension payment amount you may receive.

Residential status

You must be an Australian resident and in Australia on the day you apply for the Age Pension. You also need to have been an Australian resident for at least 10 years. Not an Australian resident? You may still be eligible in a few circumstances. Visit Centrelink website for details.

Find out if you’re eligible for the Government Age Pension. Try our online guide at australiansuper.com/GAP
Assets test

The Assets test allows you to have a certain level of assets before it affects your Age Pension payments. If you have assets higher than this level, you may still receive a pension, but it will reduce by $3.00 per fortnight for every $1,000. This is called the taper rate. If you don’t own your home, you can have more assets before your pension is affected.

Income test

The Income test allows you to earn up to a certain level of income before it affects your Age Pension payments. If you earn more than this level, the pension will reduce by 50c for a single person and 50c per couple for every dollar of income above the limit.

The Work Bonus scheme may reduce the amount of this income that’s assessed under the Income test.

Source: Department of Human Services, 20 March 2020. Centrelink figures are updated in March and September each year. Please refer to humanservices.gov.au for further information and up-to-date figures. Asset figures for a couple are combined, not per person.
Work Bonus for working longer
The Work Bonus is a Government incentive to keep older Australians in the workforce. It lets you earn up to $300 a fortnight or a maximum of $7,800 each year of employment income before your Age Pension payments are reduced.
This amount is not counted under the Income test and you can save any unused amount up to the maximum (for example if you have short-term or seasonal work). So if you keep working part-time, you could supplement the Age Pension and use less of your super.

COVID-19 Social security deeming rate changes
As of 1 May 2020, the Government has reduced the upper social security deeming rate to 2.25 per cent and the lower deeming rate to 0.25 per cent. The reductions are part of the Government response to COVID-19 (coronavirus), and reflect the low interest rate environment and its impact on the income from savings. This may benefit members who receive the Age Pension.

Help and support

Here are a few ways the Government provides financial assistance to eligible Australians.

Pensioner Concession Cards

If you qualify for the Government Age Pension, you’ll also receive a Pensioner Concession Card which can be used for:

› discounts on prescription medicines via the Pharmaceutical Benefits Scheme (PBS)
› bulk billing for doctor’s appointments (if you see a doctor who bulk bills)
› more refunds for medical expenses through the Medicare Safety Net
› access to hearing services through the Office of Hearing Services.

Depending on where you live, you may also receive:

› reductions on property and water rates, energy bills and motor vehicle registration
› a telephone allowance
› reduced fares on public transport, and free rail journeys.

Commonwealth Seniors Health Card

If you don’t qualify for a Government pension, you still may be eligible (depending on your income) for a Commonwealth Seniors Health Card, which still gives you some of the benefits listed above.

Rental assistance for non-homeowners

If you qualify for Government support and don’t own your own home, you may be able to apply for rental assistance. How much you’re eligible for depends on your family situation, for example whether you are single or a couple; whether you have dependent children and if so, how many.

Get the right advice

Now that you’re approaching the next chapter of your life, it’s a good idea to get some advice about your finances. This way you can plan ahead.

Putting you first

Financial advisers who work with AustralianSuper are required to:

› act honestly, with integrity, and in your best interest at all times
› obey by all relevant laws including the Financial Planner and Adviser Code of Ethics
› comply with industry standards and community expectations of professional practice and conduct
› maintain a program of ongoing professional development
› provide advice on a fee-for-service basis only after agreement with you
› help you make alternative arrangements if it’s in your best interests to receive advice from another provider or it’s not in your best interests to keep your AustralianSuper account.

We never pay advisers incentives, bonuses or commissions.

How your adviser can help

To help you live the life you want, your adviser can help you:

› budget and manage your money
› choose the right investment strategy
› plan for your retirement
› select insurance cover to protect you and your family
› make the most of your super.
Advice options

We have a mix of advice options to help you every step of the way.

You can access general information at no additional cost. For broader advice, meeting face-to-face with an adviser can help when you want a detailed financial plan and have a number of financial matters to think about.
