

Changing jobs doesn't mean you have to change super funds too. It's easy to take your AustralianSuper account with you through your career and into retirement.

All you need to do is provide your new employer your AustralianSuper member number in one of two easy ways:

Use the AustralianSuper app, go to the Send details to my employer section and follow the prompts.

Download the Pay my super into AustralianSuper form at australiansuper.com/changing-jobs and give the completed form to your new employer.

You're already with a great super fund

As super is one of the biggest assets you'll have in the future, it's important to make the right choices about your super savings. By taking your account with you, you keep all the benefits of your AustralianSuper membership.

A history of strong, long-term returns*
We work hard to achieve strong returns to help you retire with more.

Your future is in trusted hands

Awarded Australia's most trusted super fund for nine years running,† we're run only to benefit members – we don't pay profits to shareholders.

Help and advice

Australian Super also offers a range of flexible investment options to suit your needs, as well as different help and support options including calculators, webinars, education sessions, over-the-phone guidance, and both simple and comprehensive financial advice‡.

What happens to your insurance through super

Insurance cover through super can help provide peace of mind for you and your family. We work hard to keep costs down and provide affordable cover for members.

If you have insurance through super, you can take your AustralianSuper account and insurance with you when you change jobs. This is done by giving your new employer your AustralianSuper member number.

It's a good idea to check your insurance cover regularly as your circumstances and financial commitments change throughout your life. Visit australiansuper.com/insurance for more information.
