General advice
There’s no cost involved if it’s just general information you’re after on how to get started with financial advice. Start by checking out our online calculators or by speaking to one of our member support representatives with any general questions you may have about your super, as the cost is included in your membership with us.

Simple personal advice

Pay for advice with your super

The thought of paying for financial advice may seem impossible if you’re living from pay to pay.

But the good news is that for most members, you can choose to pay for advice from your AustralianSuper account.

So long as the advice is solely related to your super – and this covers all our super and retirement income accounts – you can depend on this simple and convenient way to pay for your advice.

Our only exception is for defined benefits members who do not have additional Accumulation accounts.
How types of advice could work

Johanna, 43 years
She’s returning to work after raising her family and has started doing her own fact finding.
She’s looking at ways to boost her super to make up for lost time. She uses the Projections Calculator on our website, to see how much money she may need in retirement and learn about ways she can grow her super savings in just a few minutes.

Marius, 53 years
He’s starting to think seriously about his super and has some questions about whether he’s invested in the right options.
He doesn’t want to be short on money in retirement. He calls and speaks with a super adviser who helps him understand the investment options available and advice on an appropriate investment strategy for him.

Gerry, 64 years
He’s planning to retire in 12 months. His wife retired three years ago and is on a disability pension.
They have an investment property and aren’t sure how this will impact their Centrelink entitlements.
He makes an appointment to see a financial adviser to discuss their situation and get a comprehensive financial plan.
